Wednesday, September 5, 2018: “The Supreme Court.” President Trump, so far, has had the opportunity to appoint two Supreme Court justices who could shift the balance of the Court for decades to come. Should Supreme Court justices continue to be appointed for life terms? If not, what would be a more appropriate term? Should presidents have the sole power to appoint judges? Should Supreme Court judges (and judges at lower levels of the Judiciary) be elected rather than appointed to office?

Wednesday, September 12, 2018: “Siblings.” Do you have any brothers and/or sisters? What was your relationship like with them? Are they still living? Was there strong sibling rivalry? Is there still? Did you ever feel like your parents favored one of you over the other? How did your sibling(s) help shape the person you are now?

Wednesday, September 19, 2018: NO MEN'S GROUP – YOM KIPPUR

Wednesday, September 26, 2018: “The Death Penalty.” Should the ‘state’ have the power to take a life in the pursuit of justice? If so, what methods of execution are acceptable? Is the death penalty a deterrent to crime? What crimes, if any, should be punishable by death?
